Collection Summary

Title: John Heney papers
Span Dates: 1918-1969
Bulk Dates: (bulk 1926-1969)
Accession No.: A1993-2
Creator: Heney, John (1902-1975)
Extent: 15 boxes, and oversized items in flat file containers ; 10 linear feet
Language: Collection material in English
Summary: Percussionist, composer, and music educator John Joseph Heney performed with circus bands from 1921 to 1926, then joined the Sousa Band for five years. He settled in DeLand, Florida, where he became a high school and university band director and influential in the American school band movement. His book The Correct Way to Drum was published in 1934. The scrapbook, ephemera, and photos he collected during his performing years help illustrate the life of a performing circus musician and a section leader in Sousa’s Band. The programs and reports of the American Bandmasters Association, as well as the correspondence with leading bandsmen of the era, the adjudication forms, newsletters, and rule sheets, indicate his level of influence as a band director, author, and clinician.

Administrative Information

Provenance

Custodial History

In 1977, John Heney donated a Sousa Band uniform coat worn by Eugene J. Slick. In 1979, Mrs. Margaret Heney donated John Heney’s Sousa Band coat. These items were stored at the Marine Corps Museum along with two boxes of other personal papers and artifacts. All items were brought to the Marine Band Library and Archives in April 1993. John Heney Jr. had previously given some printed items and a Sousa baton to the band and these were housed separately until the whole collection was processed together in 1994.

Accruals

No further accruals are expected.

Biographical Note

John Joseph Heney was born on December 3, 1902 in San Francisco. He spent his childhood in San Francisco and sold newspapers on the streets in order to pay for his music lessons. In 1939 he earned a Bachelor’s degree in music, and in 1949 earned a Master’s degree, both from Stetson University. In 1939, he married Margaret Davis, a woman who proved to be extremely supportive of Heney and his school band programs. They had three children—John Jr., Mary, and Jesse. John Heney was a man of many musical careers, including performer, educator, clinician, and composer.
John Heney’s career as a percussionist began at age nineteen when he started performing with the Sells-Floto Circus band. After three years, he moved on to perform with the Royal Scotch Highlanders in 1924. After a year with this band, Heney played with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus band under Merle Evans, and then with the McDonald’s Highlanders in 1925. In 1926, Heney became a member of Sousa’s Band. At age twenty-three, he was the youngest member ever of a Sousa Band percussion section and eventually became the section leader. He was quite a versatile player, performing on the drums as well as soloing on the xylophone. Heney’s brothers Bill and Edward were also members of the band, Edward playing saxophone and Bill serving as valet to Sousa and assistant to Willie Schneider, the traveling manager. John Heney left the Sousa Band in 1931. At a concert in Atlantic City, asked Sousa for his baton. Sousa gave him the baton and it became an item Heney dearly treasured, for it was the baton Sousa used to conduct his last concert with the Sousa Band before he died in 1932.

Having traveled the world over in Sousa’s band, Heney decided to settle in Florida for his next musical career as an educator. He taught high school band in St. Augustine and Bunnell while performing on the side to supplement his income. In 1935 he moved to DeLand, Florida, to start a band program. He proved to be a dynamic instructor and won the hearts of the students and community. Heney’s band program in DeLand was extremely successful, and his band won many superior ratings in state contests. At the same time, Heney directed the bands at Stetson University and continued to do so for seven years. He was also quite active in the National Association of Rudimental Drummers, the National School Band Association, and was one of the founders of the Florida Bandmasters Association. In 1940, Heney was elected into the prestigious American Bandmasters Association. As a member of these organizations, he was able to influence the direction of the American school band movement. By serving on the National Percussion Committee with such notables as Haskell Harr, William F. Ludwig, and George L. Stone, he helped to refine percussion competition requirements and to bring about the publication of many new works for percussion.

Heney was not only involved in school bands as a conductor, he also judged contests, spoke at clinics, and wrote articles. In 1937, Heney enlisted in the Navy to help the war effort. Though he enlisted as a member of the Seabees, he was transferred to the Norfolk Navy Yard to serve as the assistant bandmaster and as conductor of the Admiral’s Band. After the war, he returned to his high school in DeLand and also performed with the Daytona Beach Municipal Band. He taught at DeLand High School until 1963, and then taught at the junior high until his retirement in 1967. He continued to teach privately, however, and to perform as a xylophone soloist across the country. He also taught at the University of Michigan, Brevard Community College, and Polk County Community College, and was active as vice-president and archivist in the Sousa Band Fraternal Society.

Scope and Content Note

The John J. Heney collection consists mainly of correspondence, programs, newsletters and bulletins, and photos John Heney collected throughout his musical career. The collection spans from 1922 to 1969, with the bulk of the materials dating from 1936 to 1969.

Some of the gems of the collection come from Heney’s days as a performing percussionist. These include such items as route sheets and programs from the Sells-Floto Circus, the Tom Mix Circus, the Al G. Barnes Circus, the Sam B. Dill Circus, and the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus. Some mementos of the Sousa Band include a route sheet, a flyer, letterhead, employee passes, and photographs. Heney also collected a scrapbook of programs clipped from newspapers from the summer of 1926, with the encores handwritten by each piece. The collection also includes a 4-bar piece of musical manuscript to “The Wets and the Drys” in Sousa’s hand. Other Sousa mementos include postage stamps, and letterhead. Some of the items relating to the circus or the Sousa Band were given to John Heney by his brother William.

Many of the items in the collection relate to the American Bandmasters Association (ABA). These consist of programs and reports, including minutes and rosters, from the 1939 to 1969 conventions, bulletins dating from 1941 to 1969, and newsletters dating from 1947 to 1969. There is also a scrapbook of correspondence and photos pertaining to the ABA convention held in DeLand, Florida, in 1953.

Other materials in the collection include articles, booklets on music competition, adjudication forms, pamphlets for colleges and music camps, contest programs and rule sheets, and printed programs of concerts. These are all the writings or publications of the various organizations of which Heney was affiliated.

Series IV. Correspondence, 1936-1969 and undated

The correspondence includes those letters written to Heney and some carbon copies of letters written by Heney. Many letters have such items attached as pieces of music, sample adjudication sheets, pamphlets, booklets, and articles. Most of the letters discuss National Association of Rudimental Drummers (NARD), National School Band Association (NSBA), or ABA business, but some include personal notes. Some of the more noteworthy people with whom Heney corresponded are C. L. Barnhouse, Herbert L. Clarke, Raymond Dvorak, Haskell Harr, Mark Hindsley, Edwin Franko Goldman, William F. Ludwig, William Revelli, William F. Santelmann, Leonard B. Smith, and George L. Stone. There is also a large quantity of correspondence to and from A. R. McAllister, Robert Buggert, and Irving Tallmadge, as well as many music publishing firms.

Listed alphabetically by name, then chronologically therein.
